

Thrive Broker Summit offers the inside scoop on the newest best practices

Register today for two days of panels covering the latest industry changes

If feels safe to say that there are two major, distinct eras of real estate: before the NAR commissions settlement and after. Right now, we're all adjusting to how things work after the settlement, which has changed so many facets of property transactions and how brokers run their business. It's a new world for everyone, which is why we want to help you adapt to thrive.

Thrive Broker Summit, happening September 16-17 in Los Angeles, will host not just the most prominent brokers in California but also feature panels specifically addressing the new rules around representation agreements. If you have questions about who needs to sign what and when, what paperwork is needed for specific scenarios, and how you can ensure your and your clients' safety, then Thrive is the place for you.

James Dwiggins, Co-Founder and CEO of NextHome, Inc., will moderate a Thrive panel on buyer representation practices on day one, while CRMLS CEO Art Carter hosts a discussion on seller representation the day after.

Both promise to be lively and informative, and panelists will be among those mingling in Thrive's designated networking time slots.
